morning papers has regarded as optimistic by contrast with the predictions of a failing off in the steel trade made by him before his departure for Europe early in the summer There are few men more eminently qualified than Judge tiary to sice up the business situation, and when he expressed the opinion that the investment opportunities of to-day might not be equalled again in ten years. Wall Street could not help feeling impressed.

Naturally Judge Gary's interview exerted favorable influence in the trading in the I noted States Steel stocks, but in the forenoon at least there was some selling that could hardly be explained as part of a bear operation and the traders were at a loss to account for it. That the short interest is very large there can be no doubt, but that there has also been selling by some holders who have borrowed the stock instead of making deliveries of certificates bearing their own names is one of the possibilities in the case. Of course such borrowing may furnish part of the demand that has caused the stock to lend at a premium, but so far the Street has only surmise on the point. At all events the testimony of those best competent to judge is that whatever exigencies may have com pelled individuals to part with their stock, Steel common was never more valuable than it is at present.

Amalgamated Copper opened at an advance of nearly a point from Monday's closing level and continued to gain strength with the rest of the list. The improvement in the market for the stock was in a measure due to the advance in the price of the metal in London which at the opening amounted to £1% but mored that one of the largest British conas a purchaser on a large scale, and possibly as an outgrowth of this it was said that some of the heaviest consumers in this country were preparing to put in large orders in case the local selling agencies reduced the price of electrolytic to 18 cents a pound. There was no confirmation of either of these stories, although the one relating to the situation abroad was pretty generally credited.

A rumor which may have had something that the Anaconda directors would meet and recent predictions of a reduction in the rate was known that the call for the meeting had been issued, and so the part of the story that was undoubtedly true helped to win redence for the more important part that was merely conjectural. The meeting was scheduled for the afternoon but was not held on account of inability to secure a quorum.

By all odds Northern Pacific was the leader of the market, but the cause of its strength was as much of a mystery as it bad been on the preceding day. The familiar rumors were all in circulation, but no one could be found to vouch for any of them. Perhaps none of them contained the exact truth. It is not improbable that the real cause of the strength is deeper than the expectation of an increase in the forthcoming dividend or of an extra distribution of any kind. Pospered with a degree of conservatism that seeks first the stocks of companies that combine to the greatest extent present safety with possibilities of future large returns. Certain it is that Northern Pacific stands high in this class. The road continues to make great strides in earnings, and with the opening of the new line along the Columbia River will enter one of the most promising irrigated regions in the United States. A larger tonnage and a class of freight much higher than the average of the business now handled by the road are in close prospect for the Northern Pacific could well afford even under existing conditions to increase its dis-tributions to stockholders. All that stands in the way of such action is the extreme conservatism of the controlling interests. There is a point, however, at which the withholding of increased dividends would cease to be merely conservative and become reactionary.

The testimony in the Standard Oil hearing was followed closely in the Street but furnished nothing that had any bearing on the course of prices. The bears who had ex-pected sensational disclosures felt bitterly disappointed, and with their last hope of starting a selling movement practically gone began to cover their shorts, an operation which they found rather difficult. Some of the large interests expressed the view that the axtinction of the short interest would be a positive misfortune, but that if the shorts was no way of preventing it. No aggressive tactics for the rise were favored in the most powerful quarters, and the advance was very largely caused by the bears bidding against one another for the stock they needed; to retire their contracts. New York Central's rise was at the expense of the short interest, which became nervous at the near approach of the time for dividend action, as no doubt is now entertained anywhere that the regular 6 per cent. rate will be maintained for the present at all events. The statement of earnings for the current quarter is expected to make a favorable showing.

Canadian Pacific was about the only lag-gard of consequence among the railroads,

A small advance occurred early in the day, too, first to Liverpool and then here, even if it did seem a good deal like a man trying to raise himself on his own bootstraps. There seemed to be too much cotton and too little speculation The fine weather is increasing the crop, and Southern legislators have seen to it that there shall be little or no speculation. Three men usually carry on the cotton trade. I wo of them are buyers and one is the seiler planter has usually sold directly or indirectly to the spinner and the speculator | The speculator has been summarily kicked out, however, apparently because the planter does not like competition in buying. His idea apparently is that there shall be only one buyer,

him out. This impresses a good many people as a distorted variety of altruism or Quixotism likely to be very expensive to the South. However, of speculation there is little and the rapidly declining spot markets show plainly enough that the spinner appreciates the advantage given him and is buying only from hand to mouth. He is having a good trade, too, and certainly has no reason to complain, with raw cotton six cents cheaper than it was in the Sully year and print cloths one cent per yard dearer than then. Mals are sold ahead for many months to come. Bears say this is partly due to speculative operations in goods. That seems the foggiest kind of reasoning. Some speculation there doubtiess has been in pejint cloths and other cotton fabrics: there always is more or less of it; but everybody knows that speculation in cotton goods is a mere nothing as compared with speculation in raw cotton, even suffering as it is now from the dead hand of the Southern legislator. Governal trade, though it shows some falling off, is still large, as the mercantic agency returns show shirts, &c. were worn when cotton was sold at $1550 a pound and higher, but this is neither here nor there. What the speculation is controlled with now is such facts as these Good weather, favorable progress of the crop, increosing receipts, declining spot markets, more or less hedge selling here and in New Orleans, increased Southern offerings to Europe and to crown all from the technical standpoint of "future" trading, very little speculation. With the Southern speculator driven out the thing is narrowed down for the most part to a contest between the planter and spinner in which for some weeks past the spinner has had distinctly the advantage. Vesterday, too, a local statistician state the condition of the crop as 71 per cent, or only 1½ per cent, lower than that of a year age. That and a small failure in New Orleans, together with the other bearish factors, seemed to make the bullish cause more honcless than ever. But in the last hour buying set In to cover when it was found that a number of prominent houses were buying on the idea that the continued decline had become absurd and dangerons to follow. Their purchases and some general covering and a bit of board room manipulation soon reined it up and left the market at a moderate net advance for the day. It was more than a moderate advance, however, reckoned from the lowest prices of the day. There has been heavy liquidation of 'ate for New York and New Orleans and not a few think that the way is clear for a further raily, especially should the weather suddenly turn bind.

Miller & Co. said: "It looks as if the crop has been underestimated, and whether such sold the me there doubtless has been in print cloths and other cotton fabrics: there siways is more or less of it; but everybody knows that specu-

H H Rogers has been one of the most active business men of the country and the news of his illness in July had a prononneed effect on the financial markets and on the copper market in particular Then it came out in testimony on Mondathat Mr. Rogers's health was such that be would probably have to retire definitely from active business, and the question who was to succeed him as vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, president of the Amalgamated Copper Company and vice-president of the United Metals Selling Company, which disposes of all the product of Amalgamated, was discussed with interest Urtan H. Broughton, treasurer of the United Metals Selling tempany and Mr. Rogers's son-in-law, was considered on the whole much the most likely to get the vacancies. He is in close touch with the copper situation and would be best able to cope with the present very difficult state of affairs. There was a story around yesterday that a syndicate of consumers had been formed to take over the 200,000,000 pounds or more of surplus copper that is lying on the mar ket at present, but no confirmation of the rumor could be obtained in quarters that would be most likely to know about it
